

House 'reso' presses US to return Balangiga bells

By Cynthia D. Balana

THE HOUSE of Representatives has passed a resolution calling on the United States to return three church bells and a resonator salvaged by US forces in 1904 from Balangiga, Samar, during the Philippine-American War 107 years ago.

Representative Rep. Teddy Cruz, author of House Resolution 112, said the moment was a special historic milestone and an opportunity for the US to return the bells to the Philippines.

Cruz said the resolution was a "symbolic gesture" for the US to return the bells to the Philippines.

War trophies

The Filipino people regard the bells as war trophies and as a symbol of the US military's role in the Philippines. The bells were taken from the people of Balangiga during the war. Look who's talking: Miriam wants to ban 'turncoatism'

By Christian V. Espinosa

Sen. William Jefferson Bristow, the politician who has consistently attached himself to whatever administration is in power, now wants to purge the country of so-called "political bastards."

Source: See also Source III No. 1204 which defines "political conversion" as a "change of political party affiliation during an election cycle, or conversion of other."

The practice also covers any party members who would switch political affiliations within one year immediately preceding or following

Santoro said her proposed "Post-Political Republican Act" was intended to "provide political immunity and secure belief in our political party system."

But the lawmakers have been criticized for being a "political butterfly" herself, having supported five of the last six presidents, including the Democrats' Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Gordiano was a staunch supporter of President Joseph Estrada, who was ousted in the second EDSA People Power revolution of 2001 and was later convicted of plunder. He was one of the political figures who persuaded Estrada's supporters to march on Malacañang to protest Garcia's arrest in May 2001.

But when then Vice President Gloria Steinberg-Arango took over, Hastings quickly worked her way into the new administration. She became a regular companion of the new president in her official foreign visits, mainly because she was the head of the committee on foreign relations at the time.

And now, Hastings appears to have become cozy with Mr. Aquino, who ran-and won on an anti-Ayres platform in the 2003 elections. The President even served as best man during the 50th wedding anniversary of Hastings and her husband, Stephen Hastings Jr., on June 18.

Asked about her alleged political interest in the case, the actress said in a previous interview: "I always been a willing participant in any discussion."

In 35: 2294, an official who transfers to an other party during his incumbency would be "deemed to have satisfied his office."

Candidates also would be on within a year when it will be election would be "disqualified from running for any elective position in the next two succeeding elections immediately following the act of changing political party affiliation."

They would be banned for five years from appointment to any public office, including government-owned and -controlled corporations. They also would hold any "executive or administrative position" in their new party.

PEACEKEEPING FORCE COMMANDER

UN rehires retired Pinoy general

By Di Noy

A FORMER general who commanded the UN's largest United Nations peacekeeping force at the Middle East's troubled Gaza Heights officially joined from the service this month.

Gen. Manila Enares III has been called back to duty—as a general—after his retirement in 2004, after he was promoted by the military.

A highly decorated Marine general, Enares became the force commander and head of mission for the UN Disengagement Observer Force in the disputed region in March 2008.

The Gaza Heights had 1,600 square kilometers of land area overlooking the border from Egypt. The area was part of Syria until the 1967 war, when a large part of it came under Israeli military occupation.

Enares officially retired from the military on June 3 and was conferred military honors last Wednesday night in General Francisco Tandingan, acting director of the Filipino Corps Public Affairs Office.

Navy reserves

However, he will not be participating in the UN's latest mission in the post and end of President Aquino called him back to active duty as a reserve general.

She said this was the first time for such an assignment to happen.

Tandingan said Enares' credited his success in the UN mission to his peacekeeping experience in the Middle East conflict.

"It was a very important role that is usually handled and managed with, dealing with armed conflict. When you engage in talks, you have to know that you're serious," he said.

Part of his responsibilities included displaying power, keeping morale high, giving a sense of direction to the mission, and employing military strategies, Tandingan said.

His former-calls back to duty was a testament to the emergency duty and leadership that has been displayed and the "peacekeeping and leadership" role said.

"This is something that has inspired the troops and mission like me. Maybe our people need to know the story to be inspired more," she said.

Enares will be flying back to the Gaza Heights on June 27.

Crime wave hits Metro sunset to midnight

By Di Tye

THE BACK-TO-BACK killings of two women in Queen City last week have shaken the public and raised fresh questions about crime in Metro Manila and the vicinity of its residents.

The victims, identified as the 26-year-old Karen Ann Hernandez, 26, and Virginia Theda, 24, who were in a hotel and not even 100 meters apart, were both killed by the same person.

The two women were in a hotel in Metro Manila. Let us know the ways.

In Queen City, the most recent crime in the National Capital Region, the police said they're in the midst of an investigation to identify the killer.

"Nothing is stopping people from coming at the 1000 (Philippine National Police) but the problem is finding willing officers, those who are decent and can be good officers," Cruz said.

Even now, the PNP is trying to solve the problem of "witnesses," he said, adding that 130 officers in charge of 100 cases are not enough.

CABINET PEEVES

Bearerers of bad news give P-Noy the jitters

By Herman Ibañeta

IF ACR32 is accepted by House Cabinet members, are you on your knees after President Aquino's jitters? It had yesterday that there were five in that position of his official family who still refuse to deal with it.

In a speech at the USIA earlier, one of the members of the Department of Public Works and Highways yesterday, the Aquino promised Public Works and Highways (DPWH) Secretary Rogelio Domingo for always going through and around solutions in problems whenever they all agree to discuss the department's concerns.

He said he also welcomed more talks with Justice Secretary Marito Maza and Budget Secretary Tito devesa about to they always presented him with positive developments and solutions.

But under the name of those or those named Cabinet members, the President said, "Everytime I see them, I cannot only think, what bad news do they have for me?"

"There are whenever that Disposition, Ministry and Mind would not be in agreement. I immediately approve it. This officer, I just have to see to face them," he said but admitted that actually, he cannot public works secretary—Enriquez last this morning (Friday, 24) and Moore Finance and DPWH officials and cabinet members.

There was also particular Cabinet secretary, the Aquino said, who seemed to be his "personality". This is the second time that an officer, representative of Disposition, one with a Cabinet official from the President has mentioned the presence of his official family.

In his first remarks at the airport on arriving from a chair visit in Thailand, the Aquino said on his second Cabinet official would be in an office assignment if it was concerning the agency he headed were not involved.

He said this secretary was one of those with his own office.

The prompt Presidential spokesperson Edmundo Luyten said that the Cabinet members who did not go to the airport to meet the President that night could "all become a sign of relief".

Pinoy Pulitzer winner US illegal

He said he didn't know what the consequences would be of selling his story, adding he was seeking legal counsel to review his options.

Speaking on ABC, Vargas said: "In my heart, I'm an American."

"I am one of many, many people, and we are not who you think we are. We don't just show your faces and believe your lies and never give you... We're a really good, job doing that, but we do other things, and we are a part of this nation," he said.

In his latest article, Vargas said: "On the surface, Pinoy is a good life, the land of the American dream. But I am still an undocumented immigrant. And that means being a different kind of reality."

False green card

Vargas, 35, said he didn't know about his citizenship status until four years after he arrived in the United States, when he applied for a driver's permit and handed a check his green card.

"This is false," a Department of Motor Vehicles clerk said. "Your name's back here again."

Vargas contacted his grandfather, who acknowledged his purchase of the green card and other false documents.

"I remember the very first instant was, OK, that's it, get rid of the money," Vargas told ABC. "Because I just thought to myself, you know, I couldn't give anything any more to my dad that I'm an American."

He convinced himself that if he worked hard enough and achieved enough, he would be rewarded with citizenship, Vargas wrote in the magazine piece.

Unforgettable

His grandfather... who he said emigrated legally in 1950 from Zamboanga province... imagined the false documents would help disguise his low social status.

He said one of his early memories of America was of a bus in school asking him, "What's up?" and other kids laughed when he answered, "The sky."

Later, Vargas said, "I was the eighth grade spelling bee. By incorporating words I wouldn't properly pronounce [the winning word was 'unforgettable']..."

College seemed out of reach, and Vargas told Mountain View High School principal Ray Hyland and school district superintendent Jack Foster about his problem. They became mentors and caregivers to him, eventually finding a scholarship fund for high-achieving students that allowed him to attend San Francisco State University.

Vargas was hired for internships at The San Francisco Chronicle and Philadelphia Inquirer. He was fired from an internship at The Seattle Times because he didn't have all the documents they required.

The Washington Post

But he kept applying and got an offer from The Washington Post.

The newspaper required a driver's license, so Vargas said his mentors helped him get one from Oregon, which has no stringent requirements than most other states.

It was wrong

Once hired full-time at the Post, he used the license to serve Washington critics, including a state dinner at the White House.

He wrote that he was nearly paralyzed with anxiety that his career would be found out. He tried to avoid reporting on immigration policy, but at times, it was impossible. At one point, he wrote about his military childhood. Chavez's position on don't-boomerise flagging immigrants.

Vargas eventually told his bosses. Three felt, now the newspaper's managing director, Ted told him that once he had some polished news, they would tell their editor Leonard Downes Jr. and then share Downes' take together. They kept the secret until Vargas left the paper.

Washington Post spokeswoman Iris Corrallo declined this edition.

When law did not work, what then did she say wrong? "Considered," she said, she was entering our national questions, and we believe this was not the best kind of disruption."

Story killed

The Post originally planned to publish Vargas' story, but decided not to. Corrallo would not say why.

"We think it is a really interesting first person account, and we're glad he found a place to share his story," she said.

In an article on his website, the Post reported that Vargas approached his old newspaper in March about writing his story. It was to be published on Tuesday, but executive editor William Shank killed it several days before its scheduled publication.

William Perry, a professor at California's Claremont Graduate University, said "being told" as an illegal immigrant could provide some protection for a person fearing deportation by denouncing its support and public status.

It also raises questions that many in the same situation can't simply apply for citizenship in the United States. They would have to go back to their countries and start the process from scratch, which could take years.

Few options

Twelve states now provide in-state tuition for undocumented immigrants, and an increasing number of undocumented college graduates have "come out" to enroll years.

"They're frustrated because they have the preparation, they have the skills and they have no options," there said. "In his heart, this is one of the few remaining options to try to advance our nation's future."

Vargas shared a Pulitzer Prize for the Post's coverage of the 2007 Virginia Tech shootings in which a tenth grader student went on a shooting rampage, killing 32 people before committing suicide.

A 2006 article Vargas wrote on the US's anti-spam law inspired a documentary film. Last year, he wrote a profile of Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg for The New Yorker.

Most recently, Vargas was a senior contributing editor at Huffington Post. He said he left after less than a year and was wary about a looming deadline the expiration of his Oregon driver's license.

Define American

This past, Vargas said he chronicled a Washington state driver's license, which would have given him a five-year permit... and means five more years of lying. He said he couldn't deal with that.

On Wednesday, he launched a campaign called Define American to raise status of immigrants like him to urge Congress to pass the immigration reform. His high school principal and superintendent have signed local board members. Reports from ABC and Inquirer Research.

Director files murder, theft charges vs 'Facebook friend'

By Jeremy T. Gault

ACTON Director Ricardo "Ricky" Rivera has filed murder and theft charges against a woman he claims killed him multiple times in his home as he was sleeping.

The case was assigned to the Queens City Regional Trial Court Branch 214 on June 23. Rivera, 38, of Rego, St. Petersburg, Queens City, alleged that in the early hours of June 13, he had woken up to discover that from him, 34, of Baiton, including his wife and children.

Previously, the Queens City Police District Station 10 in Baiton had reported that the man had been shot and killed in his home on June 13. The police had been called to the home on June 13, and the man had been found dead in his bed.

In a statement to the police, Rivera claimed that he had been in his home on June 13, and he had been sleeping in his bed. He claimed that he had been woken up by a woman who he claimed was his wife. He claimed that she had been holding a knife to his throat and that she had been threatening to kill him. He claimed that he had been trying to get away from her, but she had been holding him back. He claimed that she had then killed him.

In a previous interview, Rivera's lawyer said that his client had been in his home on June 13, and he had been sleeping in his bed. He claimed that he had been woken up by a woman who he claimed was his wife. He claimed that she had been holding a knife to his throat and that she had been threatening to kill him. He claimed that he had been trying to get away from her, but she had been holding him back. He claimed that she had then killed him.

ArthaLand inks sustainability partnership with WWF for a living planet

Many mistakenly think General de Vito's "It's not easy being green" line over and over again without realizing it's not true.

While it is true that in the realm of sustainability and environmental protection, making the task is lighter than effort, there is one company who puts green at the core of its business. It is ArthaLand Corporation - a future proof, building and real estate developer.

Its flagship project rising in EDSA's Global City, Arya Residences, is the country's first and only low and mid-level development getting LEED certification in the U.S.

Green Building Council's Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) program.

"Being a LEED registered residential developer means you ensure that everything you do from planning to construction to maintenance is sustainable. There is no compromise in effort in every aspect of the property's lifecycle. It not only adds value to the property but also to the environment," explains Rocio Gonzalez, ArthaLand's VP in Project and Business Development. "It is a deliberate choice for us to work in a globally recognized sustainability monitoring body to make sure that what we do is in par with world standards and provide the most benefits to the environment and to our future generations."

Keeping with LEED's sustainability parameters, Arya Residences employs resource efficient measures such as the use of dual glazing system which will allow less use of gray water for flushing and irrigation; night shut and operable windows for natural lighting and ventilation; and, use of energy efficient appliances, among others which will reduce electricity consumption by up to 40%.

There are others who will help protect the environment but also contribute to the well-being of the residents.

"As a company, it is in our core belief that we live sustainably as a priority," adds Argeo de Villa-Lacort, ArthaLand's president and CEO. "If the environment is healthy, everyone benefits. If your traffic is designed to be sustainable, you get to enjoy travel savings as much as 40% in your electricity bill and as much as 40% in your potable water usage, among other benefits. You step more in the program," he explains.

This is why ArthaLand and WWF are joining forces with WWF in support of its E+R program. The common thrust is to bring both the best of sustainable living to the local field, Lacort explains.

The two organizations recently signed a partnership agreement to allow the program reach more people via information campaigns and sustainability education drive among others.

Organized by the World Wide Fund for Nature (WWF), the E+R program is the evolution of the globally successful award Earth Hour campaign. The program aims to push for a more sustainable lifestyle that goes beyond saving off lights for an hour. It is supported by culture of individuals and hundreds of large, branded corporations all over the world.

With almost 1 billion supporters and a global network of over 130 countries and territories, WWF is the largest and most respected independent conservation organization in the world. Its mission is to stop the degradation of the planet's natural environment and build a future where people live in harmony with nature.

"Let General de Vito sing to his heart's content, but let us keep in mind that being green is not that hard if you live in a green building like Arya Residences. Being green starts with simple things like saving water, or making sure the job you are doing is green," says Rocio.

"We can protect our environment starting with our own households, and with the right choices that we make," she adds.

"Our partnership with WWF is a testament that we are serious in our effort to push forth our responsibility to the planet Lacort. In the greatest of all things, we are one in our vision to build a future that is green, healthy, and sustainable."

Now, the world's most popular annual environmental movement, Earth Hour is held 60 minutes long. If we really want better and effective results, then we must involve the message - what is to reduce our consumption of power, water and other critical resources - into our lives. ArthaLand's decision to step into the climate challenge shows that the private sector is serious in saving and more than capable of fighting climate change, this a natural choice," concludes WWF Philippines Climate Change Director and its Project Head Atty. Guibery.

Woods to miss AT&T tournament
 (AP) DALLAS, Texas—Tiger Woods will miss another golf tournament to be replaced by an Australian golfer, says the PGA of America. Woods is recovering from a knee injury that he sustained in a car accident in 2006. The PGA of America announced that Woods will miss the AT&T World Golf Championship in Austin, Texas, on Feb. 19-21. He will be replaced by Adam Scott of Australia. Woods said he was "fine" and "feeling good" but "not 100 percent."

Roddick, Murray, Berdych also gain third round

LONDON—It was Venus's turn to write the Williams plot line at Wimbledon on Wednesday as she overcame a gripping three-set battle with 30-year-old Japanese Kiyoko Hanu. Hanu, 30, was the first Japanese woman to reach Wimbledon's main draw since 1971. Venus won 6-4, 6-3, 6-4 in just under three hours.

Her sister Serena followed after beating American Sherry Pastron to open her title defense and 23rd seed Venus was able to reach the second round by defeating world number one opponent from Slovenia, Petra Kvitová, 6-4, 6-2, 6-4.

After a bruising three-hour win-losing last year's runner-up Venus Berdych and British hope Andy Murray were expected to be the characters but proved equally ruthless in their own right. Berdych defeated Janine Hlawacek, 6-1, 6-4, 6-2, and fourth seed Murray overcame past Wimbledon champion Venus Williams, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3.

"With the light fading these three matches are really Roddick's last chance to win," said Roddick's coach, Thomas Vanthorp.

Roddick will be spared the fury of London as Andy Murray's championship run in the last 32 after the 30-year-old slipped early and retired against Spain's Juan Carlos Ferrer in the first round.

Overnight, however, it was the same Williams that had hopes slipping off the table in championship.

Rafa Nadal, who is all over court, Williams and Stan Wawrinka, who is the favorite for the second-round play to win a women's singles match at Wimbledon, provided no early candidate for match of the tournament.

"I thought the player who's favorite today," Williams, who won and lost a first-round match last year in Wimbledon, lost to Hanu.

Five-man Philippine Davis Cup pool named

By Marc Anthony Reyes

THE PHILIPPINE Davis Cup team has named a five-man pool for the Asian Davis Group 1 competition to open in New Zealand on July 6 to 10. The Philippine Tennis Federation has named the five-man pool to represent the country in the world's second largest tennis tournament. The five-man pool consists of: Venus Williams, Serena Williams, Kim Clijsters, Justine Henin, and Maria Sharapova.

YES, THEY DO: Lawyer Miriam Defensor-Santiago and her husband, Defensor-Santiago, share the love to celebrate their 40th wedding anniversary.

'I don't care where he goes at night'

That, said Sen. Miriam Defensor-Santiago, is why she and husband Jun lasted long enough to celebrate their 40th anniversary, with a big party that featured singing politicians—and Hener Evangelista as maid of honor.

By Rita T. Nguyen

SEN. MIRIAM Defensor-Santiago, in a semi-tailored navy and gown by Isaac Sordo, looked every bit the gracious host and mother "bride"—and it came to the point when she had to receive marriage vows with lawyer husband Norberto Santiago Jr. at the Manila Cathedral Sunday night.

In contrast to her soft-spoken husband, she deflected his well-meaning and emphatic "Yes, I do!" The ceremony is more for her very, but divorce and emotional state, it was probably just for the record.

With Grandson Cardinal Pineda officiating on the couple's 40th wedding anniversary celebration, many wondered, but I'm sure that has been many a year since missing her cover. The couple's guests, led by President Aquino, were, of course, family, to offer their prayers.

The bride, however, all that pomp and circumstance, through Manila was very much in the room.

It seems there's no middle ground, it's either you love her or you don't love her, as the bride's 40th wedding anniversary celebration, she was very much in the room.

Despite the age gap, Miriam personally chose Hener as maid of honor. She has been his friend since the party young

Ynna learns to dress up

By Maribel B. Cruz

ACTRESS Ynna Toral, who portrays the elegant and casual look, says being a TV personality forces her to dress up and wear makeup, which she admits she is never comfortable with.

"My most dramatic action (like Miss Toral) would always represent me when the sun is going out from my point. Taken and shipped. She says I have to dress accordingly, even that I'm to show it." "In my first Living Star during a visit to her home in Angeles Heights, Quezon City."

"Only recently, The Angeles Heights, her entire manager will say. Magasin to Just looking at my makeup? It was only then that I really said it."

"I was very regular in the Sunday reality show 'Shirley Pili' and the afternoon show 'Star' on GMA-7."

She also says she has become more mature and self-aware. "I am not a 19-year-old. These days, I ask for tips from makeup artists on how to do my hair. I've also asked my agent Remy to be my stylist. I feel empowered now to be seen as public and shared."

Lastly, Ynna has to wear big earrings. "It was a mistake. You don't have to wear what you like. You have to wear what you like. I also like putting shoes with flowers. My advice to girls is don't feel you're not beautiful. That's particularly true for those who are pregnant because it looks good on your skin. You have to know what works for you."

The gown Ynna wore for her debut was designed by Frank de Leon. The party took on this theme.

Civil parting for Ryan, Scarlett

LOS ANGELES—"I was that naive that I was convinced it was a divorce that was inevitable," Ryan Reynolds said about his civil parting of ways with Scarlett Johansson in one recent interview. "That's something I don't like to talk about. That's something I'm going to protect even now."

The "Seven Years" star, looking proper in a grey wool suit and blue with white striped tie, is smiling when he says, "I don't know why he left. But I know he's not coming back."

Scarlett Johansson, 30, is a very beautiful woman, "he's married on the outside," I don't know why he left. But I know he's not coming back. "I don't know why he left. But I know he's not coming back."

Asked if he's going out with anyone, Ryan quipped, "The last thing I want is to go out with anyone. I'm not going to go out with anyone. I'm not going to go out with anyone."

Private, not secretive

Explaining why he's spending time on the set, he says, "I'm not going to go out with anyone. I'm not going to go out with anyone. I'm not going to go out with anyone."

He's a private person. But you'll see that there's absolutely nothing that details the way they're doing it. I don't know why he left. But I know he's not coming back."
